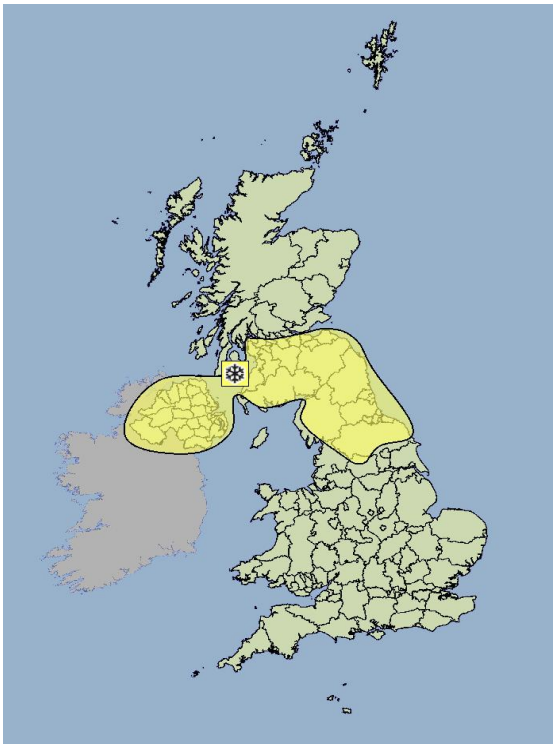
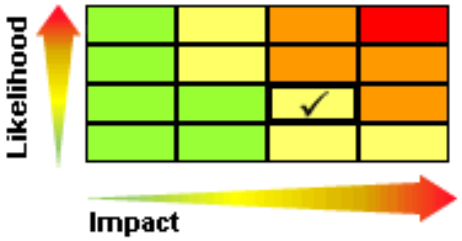
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deepening area of low pressure is expected to track east across the UK during Wednesday night and early Thursday. Across some northern areas, a spell of persistent and perhaps heavy snow is expected to develop. This could see 3-8 cm of snow accumulate in places with up to 20 cm over high ground. There remains uncertainty regarding the extent and location of any heavy snowfall.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Snow

Valid from 18:00 on Wed, 17th Jan 2018 until 06:00 on Thu, 18th Jan 2018

A spell of snow, persistent and possibly heavy, is expected during Wednesday night and early Thursday. The snow is expected to clear east before dawn on Thursday.

Travel delays are possible on roads with a risk that some vehicles and passengers could become stranded. Delays or cancellations are possible to rail and air travel. Some rural communities could become cut off. Power cuts may occur and other services, such as mobile phone, may be affected.

This warning has been updated to change the warning area by pulling the northern boundary south across Scotland and including the whole of Northern Ireland, whilst also shortening its validity time to 0600 on Thursday morning.
